

Why I volunteer at the Army Flying Museum

As a retired teacher, daughter of a wartime Lancaster pilot, and wife and mother of Army Air Corps helicopter pilots, being an education volunteer at the Army Flying Museum is a perfect fit! I enjoy the contact with families doing crafts in school holidays and running high quality activities for visiting schools, as part of the friendly education team. It is very satisfying to be involved with helping children to be inspired by history and science through their experience in the museum.
